

Prof Wayne Bryden

Wayne Bryden is currently Professor of Animal Science at the University of Queensland, Australia and prior to that appointment was Pro-Dean of the Faculty of Veterinary Science at the University of Sydney, where he was also Director of the Poultry Research Foundation. He is currently an Honorary Governor of the Foundation and an Adjunct Professor at North Carolina State University, USA. His research interests include nutrition and nutritional toxicology of all domestic species. In 2003 he was awarded the Centenary Medal for his contributions to science and education, and in 2005 he Co-Chaired the Gordon Research Conference on Mycotoxins and Phycotoxins. He is a registered Animal Nutritionist and has been a member of the Nutrition Society of Australia since its inception. He has served as Secretary, Vice President and President of the Society and is currently the immediate Past-President.