

Sara Cicerale

From the Melbourne Regional Group of Nutrition Society of Australia

Sara Cicerale completed her undergraduate degree in Food Science and Nutrition in 2004 and went onto complete her honours qualification in 2005, both at Deakin University, Melbourne. Sara is currently undertaking her PhD also at Deakin University, investigating a novel health benefiting component in olive oil named oleocanthal. Throughout her time as a PhD student, Sara has worked as a casual tutor and demonstrator. Sara is also on the HMNBS faculty board and NSA Victorian branch committees and has been part of the organising teams for the 4th Annual School of Exercise & Nutrition Sciences PhD Student Symposium (2006) and the 40th Annual Australian Institute of Food Science and Technology Convention (2007).

2008: awarded an NSA Student New Ideas Competition prize